

Hiring an Independent Toxicology Consultant from RTC

As a Sponsor, you want to retain a consultant who is dedicated to your needs and has the desired education, experience and expertise, maintains a high ethical standard of science and has an extensive network of colleagues to inquire about certain non-confidential issues that may arise. RTC members abide by a high standard of ethics and code of conduct that conforms to the standards established by the profession of toxicology.

The Roundtable of Toxicology Consultants (RTC) is designed to meet these and many more of your needs. Our independent consultant members represent hundreds of years of experience and expertise in toxicology with specialties in all industrial sectors including pharmaceutical, chemical, biologics, foods, medical devices, agrichemical and consumer health. Our members come from industry, government and academia and continues to maintain a network within those sectors.

Our independent toxicology consultant members maintain excellent working relationships with contract research organizations for placing and over-seeing toxicology programs as well as with various types of laboratories for mechanistic studies, analytical laboratories, ecotoxicology and many other specialized studies. An independent consultant plays an essential role ensuring that another service provider delivers what the client needs and not what the service provider wants to market. The RTC consultant will serve as an advocate and work in the best interest of the client.

In addition, our members are well-versed in solving regulatory and scientific issues. With the diversity of experience and network among our members, we are well suited to assist clients to ensure that ALL aspects of successful toxicology and safety evaluation programs are successful.
